

Rebekah Jackson

Rebekah Jackson writes witty, heartfelt contemporary Young Adult romance and coming of age novels featuring characters you might meet in the grocery store. Her stories explore the intersection of life's inescapable grit, the people we experience it with, and the moments that make life meaningful.

Splitting time as a child between Los Angeles and a town with no stoplight in California's Sierra Nevada mountains, she earned a degree in international relations and worked in corporate technology. Seemingly unrelated to novel writing, her day job offered a masterclass in human behavior and travel around the world, literally (holy jet lag!). With a rich trove of sights, sounds, and smells squirreled away, she now spends her time arguing with obstinate characters, searching for that one perfect word, and thinking a lot about love – in all of its forms.